I. Policy

The University of South Carolina Regional Campus System is comprised of four regional institutions: USC Lancaster, USC Salkehatchie (Allendale and Walterboro campuses), USC Sumter, USC Union (and its Laurens campus), and the USC Fort Jackson site.

The mission of the Regional Campuses is to bring the resources of South Carolina’s flagship university through the delivery of academic programs and services that enhance business and employment opportunities to citizens in twenty counties throughout the state. The campuses carry out this mission through the efforts of a faculty committed to the highest standards in teaching and discovery, application, integration, and university citizenship. These men and women are visible professionals in their communities and at every level of university governance.

Each of the regional campuses is an integral part of the community it serves, whether through the offering of selected upper-division and graduate course work; promotion of the arts; extensive offering of continuing education courses and programs; the enhancement of primary and secondary education; the development of cooperative baccalaureate programs; leadership in the development of distance learning technology, or as a first step in one’s journey in earning a baccalaureate degree at the University of South Carolina. The Regional Campus System is itself an integral part of USC, advancing the mission of the University through excellence in outreach and engagement.
