Marketing has become one of the most diverse and challenging roles inside any enterprise. Marketers are often the key stakeholders in driving performance, both in sales and profits. The marketing major explores the development, pricing, distribution and promotion of products, services and ideas. Companies are often looking for marketing specialists, and the Moore School is refining its courses to meet the needs of the marketplace in three key areas: market research and business analytics, marketing strategy and go-to-market strategy, and sales leadership and business development. Course work in marketing explores the economic, cultural, demographic and social factors that influence demand for products and services.

Companies that have recently hired Moore School marketing majors include Google, Coca-Cola, TD Bank, Vanguard, Integration Point, Ingersoll Rand, Belden, Belk, Neiman Marcus, Textron Specialized Vehicles and Walt Disney.

According to a recent USC Career Center survey, the average starting salary for Moore School marketing graduates is $46,968.

* The major course credit requirement for classes starting Fall 2017 and after will be 15 credit hours.
Marketing Business Analytics Concentration
Students may add the marketing business analytics concentration to their degree. This concentration requires four additional analytics courses, which are specified by the marketing department.

Marketing students have opportunities to gain hands-on experience through the Moore School’s Center for Marketing Solutions, which provides results from student-led marketing projects that support an extensive list of corporate partners. Select undergraduate students are assigned meaningful roles in these research projects and emerge from the program with significant real-world experience.

Marketing faculty at the Moore School are widely recognized for their expertise in key subjects such as consumer behavior, marketing strategy, research methods, behavioral pricing and marketing communications.
