School of Music Development

Thank you for your gifts to the School of Music. Your gifts ensure that the school will continue its mission to transform lives through excellence in music teaching, performance, creative activities, research, and service. Below are some highlights of the school’s most recent efforts.

Business relationships have continued with the following:
- Bose Corporation
- The Gourmet Shop
- Merrill Lynch Corporation
- Pecknel Music
- Rice Music House.

Foundation and non-profit assistance:
- Junior League of Columbia
- Nord Foundation
- Symphony League of the South Carolina Philharmonic.

Several new endowed funds have been created:
- Christopher Berg Fund for Classical Guitar
- Jerry Curry Fund for Early Instruments
- Connie Lane Fund for Flute
- James Pritchard Fund for Clarinet
- Southeastern Piano Festival
- Marian Stanley Tucker Guest Lecture Series
- Chip Williams and Elva Meggs Fund for Carolina Alive
- John Williams Fund for Piano.

Thank you to the many individuals who have contributed financially to the strength of the school. Also, we thank those individuals who have remembered the School of Music in their estate planning with a gift.

On Tuesday, April 20, 2004, this beautiful tapestry was dedicated prior to the USC Symphony Orchestra concert. Michael and Jennifer Lash presented the tapestry to the USC School of Music in honor of USC alumna and Columbia resident Dot Ryall for her dedication to the arts. The artist, Leonardo Nierman, was present for the dedication and concert.
Message from the Dean

Dear Alumni and Friends:

It has been my distinct pleasure to assume the deanship of our fine School of Music here in Columbia. In so doing, I have begun a personal journey that while having only started is already unfolding with great speed and significance. Ralph Waldo Emerson once said, “The reward of a thing well done is to have done it.” Though I have not yet done anything, I do know that what lies ahead now is that which I am confident will provide me with a great reward.

During the first few months of this journey, I have discovered a school here at USC pretty much as I thought it would be. The school is vibrant, industrious, productive, sensitive, collegial, caring, and above all, outstanding by almost every measure. What a great delight it is to come to work in such a place, and what a reward it is to have such exceptional colleagues, such a bright future for our art as manifested in the students of music at USC, and such a vital mission at the center of one's professional life!

I should also add that coming to lead such a place is not just a great reward but also a tremendous responsibility. I do not accept this responsibility lightly. I have, from the moment of my first visit to campus in April 2005, wanted to make sure that those dozens of folks who have put their collective musical and academic trust in me by identifying me as a finalist and then recognizing me as their new dean know that I hold this trust as a sacred bond to do all I can to help the School of Music at USC do all it must, in and through music, in our world.

We are all aware that our School of Music commands a national reputation for its music-making and for the high quality music education its graduates receive. This reputation, and the factors that have contributed to it, position the school to be a national leader for music in America by pursuing a natural and obtainable goal that our profession, our art, and our society require of us. We are establishing a culture of living in and through music to improve the lives of Americans.

It is my contention that for the school to achieve this goal we must meet four objectives, three of which are already part of our daily routine and current strategic plan. These three include:

1. sustaining and improving the environment for serious study of music in higher education by both music majors and general college students
2. maintaining the highest quality, integrity, and standards in all aspects of our discipline: creation (composition), presentation (performance), listening (concert attendance), scholarship, and teaching
3. creating partnerships with individuals and community institutions to improve, through music, American cultural life.

Objective number three is a reasonably new one at which our School of Music has achieved a variety of exceptional experience. Objective one suggests a course of action that is largely natural for a comprehensive school like ours to follow, but requires periodic review to make sure we are on the right track. Objective two is where we, and many of the nation's schools, make our greatest contributions to our society—by preparing excellent talent to be as excellent as it can be at delivering itself and being observed by others.

But, the fourth objective necessary for successful pursuit of our goal is one where our entire profession has not yet done much and where we are uniquely poised at Carolina to have a great impact on our culture. We must do what we can to advance in concept and in practice education in music as every musician's responsibility. We have done a fair job at this already, but now must do much more to make sure that the talent we have prepared is not only expert at delivering itself, but also at improving the lives of persons to whom it is delivered.

My vision is that the USC School of Music will be a place where the training of the future professional musician and the future music lover will be as comprehensive as the degree programs we currently offer—where we will train talented students with great musical skills to express and demonstrate what it is about their talent that is important to humanity. I believe we can do this at our school by making educating in and through music a part of basic musicianship in our professional baccalaureate curricula, right along side theoretical knowledge, aural skill, performance and ensemble skill, knowledge of history and literature, etc. If the higher education music profession expected that being a trained, thoughtful, and sensitive professional musician also meant being able to articulate the passion of one's commitment to his or her musical talent by highlighting what is great about it and why we all need that greatness, then we would transform our society into a place where more people were living in music. We can do this at USC and be a leader in doing it; so we must.

Should you desire more information about this, please feel free to review the “State of the School of Music” convocation address I delivered on Aug. 24, 2005, in its entirety at: http://www.music.sc.edu/fs/documents/State_of_the_School_2005.pdf.

Thank you as well for your support and trust. I look forward to meeting as many of you as I can and reporting to you regularly on the progress of the fine School of Music at USC, our school and yours. Emerson also said, "Hitch your wagon to a star." I am secure in the knowledge that this is what I have done.

Tayloe Harding, Dean
School of Music, University of South Carolina
By Lyn Liston

Great teachers don’t expect gratitude as a reward for their efforts—the reward comes merely from seeing growth and change in their students. But the unexpected happened for Christopher Berg on Sept. 27, 2003, when dozens of his former guitar students gathered in the Recital Hall at the School of Music to present a concert to honor the man who has run the guitar program at USC for 25 years. The concert, which had been in planning for two years, was a complete surprise to Berg. Former students—many of whom are now guitar teachers themselves—traveled to Columbia, S.C., from Alabama, Georgia, Maryland, Missouri, New Mexico, New York, and throughout the Carolinas and rehearsed in secret. Together, they represented not only 25 years of teaching, but also, through their contributions to the field of music, a legacy that is a true testament to the influence of a teacher who loves the guitar and cares deeply about his students.

The unprecedented concert began with a performance of Mozart’s Symphony No. 44 in D transcribed for guitar orchestra by David Stevenson (BM ’84), the organizer of the event and professor of guitar at Clemson University. The orchestra consisted of students ranging from those who studied with Berg when he came to USC in 1978 to current undergraduates. Other works on the program included two of Berg’s original solo compositions from his CD The Pilgrim Forest, performed by Rod Lewis, who teaches guitar and music theory at Columbia International University and Marina Alexandar, professor of guitar at Wingate College; Landfall II: Flaming Skull for MIDI guitar, composed and performed by McGregor Boyle, chair of the composition department of Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore; and Anton Diabelli’s Grande Sonata Brillante, Op. 102 for guitar and piano, performed by James Buckland, professor of guitar at Limestone College and Converse College, and Karen Wisser.

“I was floored by their gratitude and generosity of spirit,” Berg said. “It seems I am now learning from them. It was an amazing event, and I was thoroughly humbled.” The concert was preceded by an announcement that the former students had established the Christopher Berg Guitar Endowment Fund, which will endow the Christopher Berg Guitar Award, to be presented annually beginning in 2006 to the undergraduate guitar student who best exemplifies the qualities of creativity, humility, perseverance, and improvement in his or her study of the guitar and music performance. As the fund grows it will be used to endow additional undergraduate guitar scholarships.

Stevenson summed up the feelings of many who participated: “Besides feeling genuinely appreciative toward Christopher Berg and his personal style of teaching and playing the guitar, I believe all of us involved wanted to let him, the University, and the community know how we felt … Having an opportunity to pursue my dreams there has made all the difference in my life and enriched me far beyond what I ever expected or believed possible.”

Greg Shirer (MM 1990), who teaches guitar at Booker T. Washington Magnet High School and Auburn University in Montgomery, added, “I wanted to show my gratitude to Mr. Berg by spending the time and energy needed to learn the music and to travel from Montgomery, Ala. I have been teaching guitar now for 14 years. It’s been very rewarding, and I owe much of my success to Mr. Berg. He taught me how to break down problems without breaking down the student. My time as his graduate assistant gave me the practical experience needed to become a confident teacher.”

In 1978, when Christopher Berg started teaching at USC, he had about 25 to 30 students, but few of them were actual guitar majors. There were few places in South Carolina from which he could recruit students who had a significant background in classical guitar, and he accepted students on the basis of sincere enthusiasm, motivation, and curiosity. His success is due to his approach to teaching. As he explains, “I stress critical thinking and problem solving to help students discover the value and meaning of things, whether it has to do with moving their fingers more effectively or exploring ways to shape a phrase. I throw in a lot of music theory and history, and science in the form of physiology, and eventually an exposure to divergent thinking to stimulate their artistic creativity. Those who succeed will have learned invaluable lessons applicable to anything.”

Celia Reardon, who studied with Berg during summer workshops at USC during the early 1990s, is owner of Celia’s Guitar Studio in Charleston, S.C. She credits Berg for more than her success. “There are certain special teachers who come into your life and influence you for the rest of yours. Christopher Berg is one of those teachers.
The Martyrdom of St. Polycarp

In spring 2004 the culmination of a three-year collaboration between the School of Music choral area and the First Presbyterian Church of Columbia resulted in a moving new oratorio, The Martyrdom of St. Polycarp, by J.A.C. Redford. A generous anonymous donor at First Presbyterian Church and the Arpad Darazs Endowment for Choral Music at USC made this commission possible. It is fitting that the two institutions joined forces since Dr. Arpad Darazs was music director at both First Presbyterian and the University of South Carolina before his death in 1986. Dr. Larry Wyatt, the director of choral studies at USC, is also music director at First Presbyterian Church.

The composer, J.A.C. Redford, has composed music for more than three dozen films and nearly 500 episodes of series television, including multiple seasons of “Coach” and “St. Elsewhere,” for which he received Emmy nominations. In addition to his work in the film and television industry, Redford is a composer of concert music spanning symphony, ballet, arts songs, chamber music, and a significant amount of choral music. USC's association with Redford began in 1999 when USC's Concert Choir performed his choral suite “Welcome All Wonders” at its annual Christmas concert at First Presbyterian Church. Dr. Wyatt contacted Redford to discuss his music and subsequently invited him to Columbia to attend the performance. Dr. Wyatt gave the story of St. Polycarp to Redford, after which Scott Cairnes, a poet at the University of Missouri, was engaged to write the libretto.

The resulting sacred oratorio The Martyrdom of St. Polycarp, is based on the historical eyewitness account of the Bishop of Smyrna's arrest and death in the middle of the second century A.D. Employing a broad range of musical sources, from ancient monophonic chant to contemporary harmony and rhythms, the work seeks to place the listener in the midst of the story in order to experience its drama and reflect on the nature of the faith. The world premier performance was held at the First Presbyterian Church in April 2004 before a standing-room-only audience. The performance featured the USC Concert Choir, the First Presbyterian Chancel Choir, the Greater Columbia Children's Choir and soloists, accompanied by orchestra. Dr. Larry Wyatt conducted the choir and orchestra; soloists were R. Wayne Pope, Richard Conant, Bryan Haskings, Richard Veale, Jaeyoon Kim, and G. Scott Wild.

For more than an hour, the 85-member choir, with the 28-member children's choir, sang this difficult work to rave reviews. David Lowry of the Free Times newspaper said, “The work had incredible and memorable moments. This is not a work for ordinary resources, but may well become a masterpiece in the literature for major symphonies.”

After performing the work in Columbia, a group made up of concert choir members and School of Music faculty traveled to Europe to perform the oratorio. The group toured Rome, Florence, and Venice, Italy, and Varna, Bulgaria. Following these performances, the group then participated in the Sixth Varna International Conductors' Workshop in Varna, Bulgaria.
Southeastern Piano Festival

For three years the University of South Carolina School of Music piano faculty members have joined together to host the Southeastern Piano Festival. The Southeastern Piano Festival is seven wonderful days of piano at its best. Twenty talented young pianists, in grades eight through twelve, are selected from a pool of candidates to participate in the festival. These students have a daily regime of individual practice time and individual and group lessons with the School of Music piano faculty. There are also learning opportunities through lectures and master classes, as well as the special opportunity for the students to attend, as the guests of honor, world-class piano recitals given nightly by the internationally renowned concert pianists. At the end of their week of study, the students are able to compete in the concerto competition, and all 20 festival participants have the opportunity to perform in the School of Music's beautiful Recital Hall.

The public is invited to attend the daily group lessons, lectures, master classes and student recitals at no charge. For a nominal fee, the public may also attend the nightly USC piano faculty and guest artist recitals. The Southeastern Piano Festival is the creation of artistic director Marina Lomazov.

The 2006 Southeastern Piano Festival was held June 11–17 and featured guest artists Jon Nakamatsu, 1997 gold medalist of the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition; Ann Schein, master teacher and concert pianist; Virginia Marks, Marian Stanley Tucker Guest Lecturer; Di Wu, winner of the 2005 Hilton Head International Piano Competition; and Phillip Bush, concert pianist. For a list of guest artists, lecturers, participants and concerto winners from prior festivals, please visit the Southeastern Piano Festival Web site at sepf.music.sc.edu

Arthur Fraser Young Artist Competition

The USC School of Music is pleased to announce its partnership between the Arthur Fraser Concerto Competition and the Southeastern Piano Festival. The Arthur Fraser Concerto Competition is sponsored by the Symphony League of the South Carolina Philharmonic.

The first prize winners of the Southeastern Piano Festival Concerto Competition are referred to as the “Southeastern Piano Festival and Arthur Fraser Concerto Competition Winners.” The concerto competition winners’ performance with the South Carolina Philharmonic is sponsored by the Symphony League of the South Carolina Philharmonic.

The University of South Carolina School of Music and the Southeastern Piano Festival are happy to extend

Marian Stanley Tucker Guest Lecture Series

In 2004, alumni and current piano students joined together to honor Marian Stanley Tucker by creating an endowed fund. Marian Stanley Tucker has been teaching children to play the piano for nearly six decades. Tucker has had a tremendous impact in our community by promoting love and appreciation of music. The Marian Stanley Tucker Fund has been established to honor her contributions to the musical life of Columbia and to the musical education and development of young people. Her immensely positive influence has helped many students and their families. This fund will support an outreach program for piano teachers and the community as part of the Southeastern Piano Festival Guest Lecture Series. Contributions may be made to this fund at anytime by contacting Leslie Wrenn at 803-576-3897 or lwrenn@sc.edu.

USC Piano Faculty: Charles Fugo, Joseph Rackers, Marina Lomazov, Scott Price, and John Williams (not pictured)

a warm welcome to all Symphony League members. The Symphony League of the South Carolina Philharmonic fosters, promotes, and increases musical knowledge and appreciation of the performing arts in the community and cooperates with and supports the South Carolina Philharmonic.
Laury Christie Retires from the School of Music Faculty

During two and one-half decades as a distinguished faculty member at the University of South Carolina School of Music, Professor Laury Christie's academic tenure has been characterized by exceptional teaching and distinguished performance. Her arrival at USC was preceded by several years as a highly successful opera singer in Germany, and her entrance into the world of academia enhanced her forays on the operatic stage.

The Columbia community was soon treated to her lovely portrayals of Mimi in La Boheme, and Marguerite in Faust.

Throughout her career Laury Christie has remained active as a recitalist, oratorio performer, and collaborative artist in numerous chamber music presentations, and her studio has produced many talented singers who have ultimately advanced to successful careers as teachers and performers. While at the University of South Carolina School of Music, Professor Christie instituted curricular offerings in the Alexander Technique, a technique widely acclaimed for the physical and psychological benefits it provides to both singers and instrumentalists.

Professor Christie remains a nationally recognized teacher in the profession and has frequently been invited to serve as adjudicator, clinician, and presenter of workshops across the country.

Southern Exposure

In five short years Southern Exposure has developed a wide and loyal following of music lovers who enjoy experiencing tomorrow's masterpieces today. USC School of Music composition faculty member John Fitz Rogers created the Southern Exposure New Music Series to introduce contemporary classical music to the USC community. The title Southern Exposure has a double meaning. First, the series exposes students at USC to different kinds of music written by living composers as well as important repertoire written in the past century, and secondly, it exposes the broader community and visiting artists on the series to the talents of the School of Music's faculty and students.

Concerts have featured performances by internationally recognized artists such as the So Percussion Ensemble, pianists Yak Bjorken, Phillip Bush, and Lisa Moore, and the Ciompi String Quartet. Guest composers also have the opportunity to work with USC students in master classes and with the performers as they rehearse original compositions.

Go to www.music.sc.edu/events for the 2006-2007 Southern Exposure series concert dates.

Doug Graham: Carolina’s MVP

By Gordon (Dich) Goodwin

Distinguished Professor Emeritus and friend of Doug Graham

When Doug Graham showed up to study at the University of Texas at Austin it was obvious that he was a major talent and a most musical soul. He captured the top spots in the band, orchestra, and jazz ensemble, and his recital was pure gold. I still hear his Berg performance in my mind’s ear. After college he completed stints in Texas and Louisiana until William Moody (USC music department head at the time who had taught Doug in Mississippi and at UT) asked him to apply for a slot on the USC faculty.

Doug is master teacher who has placed students in prestigious positions around the country. He taught methods courses, helped run the summer music camp, and served on about every thankless committee in the School of Music. Then there was the playing—principle clarinet and regular soloist with the South Carolina Philharmonic, a first-call chamber player and studio musician, guest soloist with many area ensembles, member of the Carolina Jazz Society House Band, and baritone saxophonist with the faculty sax quartet. Graham is often referred to as Carolina’s “most valuable player.” I always told my composition students to write for the very best players because a great performer can make it appear that you know what you are doing. I cannot count the pieces and film scores that I have written featuring Doug. He is the sound behind a good hunk of the successes in my career.

When I learned that he had accepted the job here I told him that I also needed him to play in my jazz groups. He was reluctant because he had taken only one semester of improvisation in school and had not had many chances to practice it since. I explained that he could always play his solos first so he would not have to follow more experienced players … like me. That lasted for a couple of months. Now no one wants to follow him!

Did I mention that he is a nice guy? Doug Graham is a gentleman, a deep and clear thinker, and a master of understated humor. So many of us are proud to call him friend, and we are so lucky that he landed in our community. We wish him and Rene a wonderful (semi) retirement … and a full life without committee meetings.
Tribute to Dr. William J. Moody

By Jim Copenhaver

In 1973, Dr. William J. Moody left the University of Texas at Austin, where he was director of bands and vice chair of the department of music to become head of the department of music at USC. He was hired by President Tom Jones and requested to consider building the department in the model of a pyramid. President Jones was personally interested in the music department having a broad base. If Moody fulfilled this request, he could expect to receive the support to build the pyramid as tall as he desired.

First-year initiatives to broaden the base included returning the oversight of the USC marching band and basketball pep band to the music department from the athletic department, creating the vocal pep ensemble Carolina Alive, and establishing the Christmas Music Festival, an annual gift to the community. These steps were just the beginning for establishing a visible record of service to USC, Columbia, and South Carolina, which were to provide a source of pride to the School of Music. The school's outreach has grown in numerous ways. The South Carolina Philharmonic Orchestra is comprised substantially of the school's faculty and graduates. Church choirs in Columbia, by and large, are conducted by USC faculty and graduates and are among the best anywhere. Public-school music programs in the state are led largely by USC graduates. Music clubs and music teacher associations regularly use the school's facilities for conferences and meetings. Hundreds of thousands of USC fans and supporters enjoy the Carolina Band, the Mighty Sound of the Southeast, at Williams-Brice Stadium and pep bands at sporting events other than football. The School of Music is an ambassador of goodwill for the University. Unfortunately, 1973 was also the year for the onset of an economic recession that has lasted to this day in terms of funds provided for higher education. Neverthelessteam of the University.

Some of the milestones achieved by Moody during his 17 years of service as head, chair, and director of the School of Music are as follows: In the 1972–1973 academic year, there were 20 full-time faculty positions and about the same number of graduate assistantships in the Department of Music. During Moody's years of leadership, the department grew to 41 faculty positions and approximately 50 graduate assistantships. He understood that it is the quality of faculty that makes the difference and was instrumental in seeing that outstanding musicians were hired to build a great school. Given the mission and location of USC, he recognized the band, choir, and orchestra as the representatives of the best performing ensembles in the nation and always supported the organizations to help them achieve this goal. In order to develop a graduate program in voice, he supported the building of a strong opera program. Moody was able to win the battle to keep a separate music library when a centralized library was the goal of the library director and the practice at this University.

Recruitment of quality students is a prerequisite for the establishment of a strong music program. It was through Moody's efforts that a University fee structure gained approval, enabling an out-of-state student receiving a $250 scholarship to be assessed the in-state tuition rate. And later, it was at his instigation that University officials pressured the legislature to grant tuition waivers; the tuition waiver program funds the majority of the school's allocation for music scholarships.

Moody founded the USC String Project that has strengthened string instruction in the public schools and has become a model for similar projects at other institutions nationwide. He also established the USC Prep Program for teaching wind and percussion instruments to public-school students. Several master's degree emphases and a very successful doctoral program were established during the Moody years, which paved the way for USC to become a comprehensive School of Music. Facilities were expanded to accommodate the school's growth, including use of the Dorn apartments and Hamilton basement and building an annex to the Band Hall. Rooms were made available for piano and equipment storage so recitals could be presented at Gambrell Hall. The Koger Center for the Arts was constructed during the Moody years, and a new music building was placed at the top of the list of capital projects for the University.

Moody established the journal Update: Applications of Research in Music Education. The journal subsequently became a publication of the Music Educators National Conference, but USC is still credited on the title page for being the original sponsor.

Moody never missed a chance to stress the need for a freestanding school of music with a dean reporting directly to the provost; this structure is the administrative arrangement in most of the strong music schools nationwide. Moody began the quest when Keith Davis was USC's provost in the mid 70s, and it was about 20 years later when Davis became dean of humanities that the school's status was achieved.

Moody wrote to then Provost Jerry Odom the following: "I want to urge fuller support for the School of Music, which could reach its full potential at relatively little cost should the central administration shift a few more funds in its direction. The great music schools usually have faculties of 70 to 100 or more. Music has planned carefully and can be truly great with only a few more faculty and staff positions than it presently has and a modest increase in the operating budget. Except for a mid-sized concert hall, we have the necessary facilities. With just a little help, the dean will lead our School of Music to a new level and the quality of life at this institution, in Columbia, and throughout

Cornelia Freeman

At 93, Cornelia Freeman has the energy of a college student. Always involved in the arts around the Midlands, Freeman showed an interest in music, particularly the piano, beginning at age 10. A 1933 graduate and valedictorian of Columbia College, she earned her Bachelor of Arts degree, as well as a diploma in piano. She has been honored with the Columbia College Medalion and was awarded the Honorary Doctor of Music Degree from Columbia College. In 1997 the University of South Carolina presented her with the Distinguished Service Award.

A mother of four, granddaughter of five, and great grandmother of two, Freeman says she "has always enjoyed keeping records and writing." Her dedication to music has led her to hold the following positions with music clubs around the Midlands: board member of the Columbia Council on the Arts, the South Carolina Opera Workshop Guild, Columbia Philharmonic Orchestra Association; president of the Afternoon Music Club, S.C. Federation of Music Clubs; secretary, regional vice president, and director of the National Federation of Music Clubs; and historian since the inception of Friends of the USC School of Music in 1992.

Each year, the faculty and staff of the USC School of Music unite to present an enriching concert series at the beginning of the academic year. For more than two decades, this series has raised scholarship funds for worthy USC music students. Through a generous gift from Cornelia Freeman, the operating expenses for these concerts are fully funded. As Mrs. Freeman wishes, all earnings from the concerts are placed in a fund to award scholarships to music majors in honor of the faculty members who perform in the concerts. The School of Music greatly appreciates Mrs. Freeman's generous support.

Welcome to the School of Music

joined the USC School of Music faculty in August 2005 as assistant professor of double bass and jazz studies. Butterfield holds a BM in double bass performance with a minor in theory and an MM in double bass performance with a minor in jazz studies from the University of North Texas. He is also pursuing a Doctorate of Musical Arts degree in Double Bass Performance with a Minor in Jazz Studies from the University of North Texas.

Butterfield has toured extensively as a jazz artist as well as a classical soloist and clinician. In 2004 and 2005, he toured with the legendary jazz trumpet player Maynard Ferguson. Butterfield has also been active in the studio, appearing on several jazz CDs as both a performer and a producer.

In the classical field, Butterfield has taught master classes and recitals as a soloist at several universities and has twice been invited to perform recitals at the semiannual International Society of Bassists Convention. His many compositions and arrangements include works for bass quartet, jazz string ensemble, solo double bass, and percussion ensemble.

Dr. Peter A. Hoyt

joined the USC School of Music faculty in August 2004 as assistant professor of music history. He received his advanced musical training at the University of Pennsylvania, where he simultaneously pursued the BA in music (studying oboe as a scholarship student of Richard Woodhams, principal oboist of the Philadelphia Orchestra) and the MA in musical composition (studying with George Crumb, George Rochberg, and Richard Wernick). After a period as a freelance musician, he returned to the University of Pennsylvania to research the history of music theory, completing the Ph.D. in 1999. Dr. Hoyt also studied Baroque contrabass at the Oberlin Baroque Performance Institute; on that instrument he has recorded for the Dorian, Helicon, Omega, and Vox labels.

Much of Dr. Hoyt’s scholarly work involves the history of technical writings about music. He is currently revising a book-length study, to be published by Cambridge University Press, titled Haydn and Sonata Form: Modern Ideals and Eighteenth-Century Practice.

Since arriving at the School of Music, Dr. Hoyt became deeply involved in the planning of the South Carolina Mozart Festival, a three-week event (Jan. 21 to Feb. 12, 2006) that honored the 250th birthday of the composer.

Joseph Eller

joined the faculty in August 2005 as assistant professor of clarinet. Eller came to South Carolina from Kennesaw State University in Georgia where he had served as the clarinet professor since 1998. Eller received a BM in clarinet performance from Eastern Michigan University and an MM in clarinet performance from Louisiana State University.

Eller has performed as a soloist throughout the United States, Europe, and Japan. He plays with the Atlanta Opera Orchestra and serves as an extra with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra.

Dr. Jeremy Lane

joined the faculty of the School of Music in August 2003 as assistant professor of music education. Lane holds degrees in music education from New Mexico State University and Baylor University and a Ph.D. in music education from Louisiana State University. He has taught in the Texas public school systems, as well as University courses in elementary music methods, brass methods, and music appreciation. University and high-school ensembles have performed some of Lane’s transcriptions for winds, including Baylor University Marching Band, Louisiana State University Chamber Winds, and New Mexico State University Wind Ensemble.

Dr. Lane has presented research on regional and national levels and has received an award for excellence in research from the Louisiana State University Graduate School. He has served as a clinician and adjudicator in New Mexico, Texas, and Louisiana and is a member of MENC, Society for Research in Music Education, Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, and Phi Kappa Lambda National Music Honor Society.

Dr. Joseph Rackers, pianist, joined the School of Music piano faculty in August 2004 as a visiting assistant professor of piano and chamber music.

Dr. Rackers holds degrees in education from the University of Missouri (BS) and piano performance from the Eastman School of Music (MM, DMA) where he was also awarded the Performer’s Certificate (2000) and Excellence in Teaching Prize (2001). Dr. Rackers has served on the piano faculties of the Eastman School of Music Community Education Division, Hochstein Music School, and since 2002 has served as piano department coordinator at the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp, Michigan.

Dr. Rackers has performed across the United States and abroad as a soloist and chamber musician. Recent performances include concerts at the Banff Centre for the Arts, Canada; International Academie
Moulin d'Andé, France; South Carolina Federation of Music Clubs Convention and Southeastern Piano Festival; Blue Lake Summer Arts Festival, Michigan; Opus Classics Live and Live from Hochstein recital series, New York; Hilton Head Sunday Musicales Concert Series; Chancellor’s Emerging Artist Concert Series, Missouri; and Washington Square Concert Series, New York.

Ellen D. Schlaefer

joined the faculty in August 2004 as assistant professor of opera studies. In her first season, Opera at USC presented three operas—Trial by Jury, Monsieur Chouchou, The Merry Wives of Windsor, and an outreach program—Luisa Fernanda a zarzuela, which toured area schools.

Schlaefer is a native of Columbia and holds a BA from Davidson College and an MFA in directing from the Catholic University of America.

She has staged operas throughout the country, including productions with the Washington Opera, Houston Grand Opera, Opera Memphis, Houston Ebony Opera Guild, Michigan Opera Theatre, Opera Carolina, Connecticut Opera, Augusta Opera, Opera Illinois, Orlando Opera, Cleveland Opera, and the Santa Fe Opera Tour. Equally at home on the legitimate and musical theatre stages, she has directed The Goat or Who is Sylvia for Trustus Theatre, Master Class, Grace and Glorie, You Can’t Take It With You and The Sisters Rosensweig for Workshop Theatre of South Carolina; musicals A Chorus Line, South Pacific, Oklahoma and The King & I for Artpark, Lewiston, NY; Sweeney Todd for the Princeton Festival and She Loves Me for Coastal Carolina University.

Dedicated to arts education, Schlaefer is founder and general director of FBN Productions, Inc. Opera for Kids, a touring company based in South Carolina that specializes in bringing opera into the schools of the Southeast. FBN has shared the joys of live opera with more than 200,000 young people.

Tina Milhorn Stallard, soprano, joined the School of Music voice faculty in August 2004 as assistant professor of voice. Stallard earned an undergraduate degree in music education from Belmont University, an MM degree in voice from the University of Kentucky, and a DMA degree in voice from the University of Cincinnati College Conservatory of Music. Stallard came to USC from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, where she served as an instructor of voice. Opera credits include Beth in Little Women, Abigail in The Crucible, and Barbarina in the Italian premier of Cassanova’s Homecoming. As a concert soloist, Stallard has performed such works as Brahms’ Ein deuches Requiem, Haydn’s Creation and Lord Nelson Mass, and Mozart’s Requiem and Vespers K. 339.

John Kenneth Adams, professor emeritus, continues to perform both in the U.S. and abroad. He performed for the MTNA National Convention in Seattle and presented a new piano portrait on the life of Maurice Ravel at USC. Adams continued for the fourth year as chair of the judges for the Southeastern Piano Festival Concerto Competition at USC. He traveled to Europe three times in 2005, performing at the Royal Academy of Music in London, at the Varna International Master class and Competition in Varna, Bulgaria, and at the Zermatt Festival in Switzerland. He continues to perform every year and will be performing at the USC School of Music in “An Evening With Debussy” on Tuesday, Oct. 24, 2006 at 7:30 p.m. For more information please visit his Web site www.johnkennethadams.com.

Reginald Bain, professor of composition, presented a paper titled “Numerussonoros: Using Max/MSP to Explore the Compositional Potential of Number Sequences and Deterministic Algorithms” at the National CMS/ATMI Conference in Miami. He was also an invited guest speaker at the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics regional conference in Charleston, where he presented “Mathematical Images of Music.” He served as editorial consultant for the fifth edition of Kostka/Payne Tonal Harmony (McGraw Hill): An Introduction to Twentieth-Century Music.

Gail Barnes, associate professor and area coordinator of music education, serves as chair of the collegiate roundtable for ASTA. She is currently working on a project to develop a best practices Web site for string and orchestra teachers. She is editing Applying Research to Teaching and Playing Stringed Instruments, which has contributions from 15 authors.

Christopher Berg, professor of guitar, has presented recitals at the New England Guitar Festival in Boston, the Radford University International Guitar Festival in Virginia, the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, and the Appalachian Guitar Festival in Boone, N.C., where he presented “Interpretive Structures and the Archaeology of Musical Styles.” In 2003 he was awarded the Cantey Outstanding Faculty Award by the School of Music.

Craig Butterfield, assistant professor of double bass. Butterfield presented a recital and lecture on the ergonomics of playing the double bass at the annual Violin Society of America’s Convention in Philadelphia. Butterfield also performed recitals throughout N.C. and S.C. with classical guitarist Matthew Slotkin. In January 2005 he recorded a CD with South Indian percussionist Poovaiar Srinivasan and current Maynard Ferguson drummer Stockton Helbing, blending classical India music with western jazz.

Laury Christie, professor emeritus of voice, participated in the International Conference on Body Mapping in Salem at Willamette University and performed chamber music at the conference.

James Copenhaver, director of bands, was guest conductor of the senior symphonic band at the Rocky Mountain Summer Music Camp on the campus of Colorado State University in Ft. Collins in July 2005. He served as a guest conductor of the SCBDA Region 2 Senior Band in February 2006. In 2004 he was guest conductor of the honor band at the Tennessee Technological University’s 41st Annual Festival of Winds and Percussion and was a featured conductor of the Tara Winds at the Southern Division Convention of the College Band Directors National Association and the National Band Association in Atlanta, Ga.

Walter Cuttino, associate professor of voice and voice area coordinator, serves as artistic director for the Palmetto Opera, and director of the Palmetto Mastersingers, who recently celebrated their 25th anniversary. The group will perform in China during summer 2006.

Ronald A. Davis, professor of tuba and euphonium, recently completed and updated a discography of solo tuba recordings for the revised edition of The Tuba Source Book, published by Indiana University Press. Dr. Davis authored the original discography chapter in the first edition, published in 1993. He is currently researching a history of the tuba in the Hollywood recording industry, profiling the careers of major studio’s most influential tuba artists. Dr. Davis will present a faculty tuba recital on Nov. 9, 2006 at 7:30 p.m. in the School of Music Recital Hall.

Samuel Douglas, professor of composition, received an ASCAP award from the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers.

Brad Edwards, associate professor of trombone, performed as a soloist with the United States Army Band in Washington D.C., and premiered a new arrangement of Richardmonic’s first sonata prepared by alumnus George Schneider. He was awarded a University research grant to commission USC emeritus composer Gordon (Dick) Goodwin to write a new work for trombone and piano and premiere the work in a solo tour in Texas. In commemoration of the first and second International Trombone Weeks, Edwards was asked to compose fanfares for trombone octet. The results, Bone Week Fanfare 1 and Bone Week Fanfare 2, were posted on the International Association’s official Web site. His second book, Lip Slurs: Progressive Exercises for the Development of Tone and Technique, will be released by Ensemble Publications. Dr. Edwards will present a faculty trombone recital on Oct. 23, 2006 at 7:30 p.m. in the School of Music Recital Hall.
Faculty Activities

Gordon (Dick) Goodwin, distinguished professor emeritus, and Samuel Douglas, professor of composition, premiered pieces at Spoleto 2004 as part of the Charleston Chamber Players’ tribute to South Carolina composers.

Andrew Gowan, associate dean, has been promoted to full professor. His composition Windfall for unaccompanied saxophone and his saxophone quartet arrangement of John Bull’s Galliard to the Pavan are available through Roncorp Publications.

Scott Herring, assistant professor of percussion, performed with the Florida State University Percussion Ensemble in March 2004 and premiered a new work by John Fitz Rogers, assistant professor of composition, in spring 2004. Dr. Herring is a member of the Shiraz Percussion Trio. The trio performed at Ohio State University, South Carolina Day of Percussion, and Coastal Carolina University in 2004. Dr. Herring will present a faculty percussion recital on Sept. 7, 2006 at 7:30 p.m. in the USC School of Music Recital Hall.

Julie Hubbert, professor of music history, was invited to lecture at universities in Europe: The University of Graz, Austria, and the Institute für Wertsungsforshung to lecture at a special conference on film music. An article titled “Bach and the Rolling Stones: Scorsese and the Post-modern Soundtrack in Casino (1995),” was subsequently published in Tonspuren: Music in Film: Fallstudien 1994–2001, Studien zur Wertungsforshung (Universal: Vienna, 2005). Her paper titled “Without Music I Would Be Lost: Scorsese, Music, and Authorship” was presented at a film studies conference at the University of Texas. She presented a paper at the national meeting of the American Musicological Society in Washington D.C., titled “Unfettering the Tongue of Kitsch: Mahler and the Trivial as Folk.” In March 2006 she traveled to Chicago to present a paper at the Society for American Music titled “My Way: Musical Rhythm, Text, and Style in Scorsese’s Goodfellas.” At the same conference, with music historian Willie Strong, she cosponsored “Lost American Music” a special screening of films of African-American musical performances from the USC Fox Movietone News Collection. Her article “Modernism at the Movies: The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari and a Silent Film Score Revisited” appeared in the winter 2006 volume of The Musical Quarterly. An article on music in Eisenstein’s theory of montage will be published in Composing for the Screen in the USSR and Germany (Indiana University Press). Her book Celluloid Symphonies: Texts and Contexts in Film Music History is forthcoming from the University of California Press.

Robert Jesselson, professor of cello, taught at the Green Mountain Festival in Vermont, the North Carolina School of the Arts, and the ARIA Festival in Indiana during the summer of 2005. He was the recipient of the first SC-ASTA Studio Teacher Award in 2005 and was given the honor of being the “title” for the national award given by ASTA to a string project with the Robert Jesselson String Project Award. He received a School of Music research grant for his work on biofeedback for reducing tension in practice and performance. In fall 2005 Jesselson hosted the 26th annual S.C. Cello Choir at the Koger Center, with 147 cellists attending, and with cellist David Ying as clinician. In November 2005 he held recitals in New York City and performed the Tchaikovsky Rococo Variations with the USC Symphony Orchestra.

Carol Krueger, associate director of choirs, was the guest conductor of the North Dakota ACDA Collegiate Honor Choir, Horry County High School Honor Choir, Pickens County Middle School Honor Choir, and the Georgia District One Middle School Honor Choir. She was invited to conduct the South Carolina Women’s All-State Choir in March 2006. Under Dr. Krueger’s direction, the University Chorus performed at the South Carolina Music Educators Conference in 2005. Krueger presented interest sessions at the North Dakota ACDA Conference and the North Dakota MENC Conference. In addition, she was the choral clinician for the Tennessee Arts Academy, a weeklong workshop for arts educators held at Belmont University in Nashville, and was guest clinician for the Greater Boston Area Choral Workshop held in Brookline, Mass. In December 2005 Dr. Krueger was invited to conduct the orchestra and mass choir for the Epcot Candlelight Processional at Disney.

Constance Lane, professor of flute, received the 2006 Cantey Outstanding Faculty Award for Excellence.

Clifford Leaman, professor of saxophone, was promoted to full professor. In summer 2005 he released a CD titled Illuminations on the Equilibrium label (EQ-77) with pianist Derek Parsons, featuring recent works by five young American composers, including USC composition faculty John Fitz Rogers and Reginald Bain. Dr. Leaman was the featured guest artist and clinician at the 2005 Yantai International Winds Arts Festival and the 2005 Xian International Clarinet and Saxophone Music Festival in China. In summer 2006 he will travel to China again and will serve, in Columbia, as the director of the Carolina Summer Music Conservatory.

Marina Lomazov, assistant professor of piano, is the artistic director of the Southeastern Piano Festival, now in its fourth year. Lomazov also spends summers teaching and performing at the Brevard Music Center. Lomazov was in Europe in May 2005 to teach and perform in Bulgaria, at the Varna International Piano Master Classes and to perform Rachmaninoff’s Second Piano Concerto with the Northern Chamber Orchestra at the Bollington Festival near Manchester, England. Lomazov performed with the Charleston Symphony in the 2005 Piccolo Spoleto Festival and opened the 2005–2006 season performing Tchaikovsky’s First Piano Concerto with the Redlands Symphony Orchestra and gave a solo recital at the “Sundays at LACMA” live radio broadcast in Los Angeles, Calif. Other engagements for the 2005–2006 season included performances with the South Carolina Philharmonic, GAMAC Symphony Orchestra, and the USC Symphony Orchestra, performing a Mozart double piano concerto with her husband and piano-duo partner, Joseph Rackers, visiting assistant professor of piano. Drs. Lomazov and Rackers will perform a duo piano recital on Nov. 27, 2006 at 7:30 p.m. in the School of Music Recital Hall.
Rebecca S. Nagel, professor of oboe, performed in June 2005 at the annual conference of The International Double Reed Society in Austin, Texas. Dr. Nagel was joined by colleagues Carol Cope Lowe, bassoon, and Lynn Kompass, piano. Nagel's article "A Few Thoughts on Practicing" appeared in The Double Reed, Vol. 25, No. 4. This article was subsequently translated into German and appeared in the Rohrblatt, a publication of the German oboe, clarinet, bassoon, and saxophone societies.

Dorothy Payne, professor of music theory, received the Gail Boyd de Stowolinski Lifetime Achievement Award for Music Theory Teaching and Research. She also received the 2005 Caney Outstanding Faculty Award for Excellence. In September 2005 Dr. Payne was invited for a four-day residency at the University of Oklahoma where she presented a lecture and master class.

Donald Portnoy, professor of orchestra, conducting, and violin, is a regular participant at the Spoleto Festival in Charleston, S.C. Dr. Portnoy is also the director of the Conductor's Institute of South Carolina.

Scott Price, associate professor of piano, presented recitals and master classes in Singapore, Bangkok, Thailand, and in Kuala Lumpur and Penang, Malaysia. He recently performed Mozart's Piano Concerto in A Major with the Lake Murray Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Price was invited to the University of Oklahoma for a three-day distinguished guest alumnus residency, where he performed a recital and presented a master class and lectures. He was a featured speaker on piano study and autism at the National Conference on Keyboard Pedagogy. Dr. Price was featured on Dateline NBC as part of a story on one of his autistic piano students. He serves on the research committee of the National Conference on Keyboard Pedagogy and was named to the organizing committee of the National Group Piano/Piano Pedagogy Forum conference. He recorded his 20th CD of educational piano music for Alfred Publishing Company and his Internet journal on piano pedagogy "Piano Pedagogy Forum" has entered its ninth year of publication.

Joseph Rackers, visiting assistant professor of piano and chamber music, served on the faculty and performed at the second annual Varna International Piano Master Class in Varna, Bulgaria, in May 2005. In April 2005 he was the Second Prize Winner of the Bienniel Ellis Duo Piano National Competition along with his piano-duo partner Mariona Lominadze. Also in 2005 he performed recitals in Charlotte, N.C., at the Blodgett Recital Series in Michigan and served as adjudicator for the Music Teachers National Association piano competitions in Virginia. During summers he serves on the faculty and coordinates the piano department of the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp in Michigan. He was recently featured in The State Newspaper in its "Ten Under Thirty" series, showcasing area artists.

William Terwilliger, professor of violin, tours and performs as part of the duo Terwilliger-Cooperstock, with Andrew Cooperstock, pianist. Recital performances have included performances in Texas, Georgia, the University of Colorado at Boulder, University of Arkansas-Little Rock, Baton Rouge, and in New Orleans. The duo performs at Brevard Music Center where Terwilliger has been on the faculty for 14 years. Terwilliger has recorded a CD of chamber works by New York composer Lowell Liebermann, funded in large part by the Office of Research at USC. Dr. Terwilliger, with Andrew Cooperstock, will present a faculty recital on Sept. 16, 2006 at 7:30 p.m. in the USC School of Music Recital Hall.

Helen Tintes-Schuermann, assistant professor of voice, completed the Doctor of Music at Northwestern University. Dr. Tintes-Schuermann and her husband, Klaus Schuermann, released a CD, These Precious Days, along with Gordon (Dick) Goodwin, professor emeritus. Dr. Tintes-Schuermann is the director of the new International Course in Spanish Music being taught for the first time in Madrid, Spain, summer 2006. Dr. Tintes-Schuermann will present a faculty recital on Oct. 9, 2006 at 7:30 p.m. in the School of Music Recital Hall.

Wendy Valerio, associate professor of music education, presented "Toddler Music Syntax Acquisition in Music Play and General Play Environments: Cultural Connections" at the 13th International Congress of the Gesellschaft für Musikforschung held at the Hochschule für Musik Franz Liszt Academy in Weimar Jena, Germany, in 2004. While in Germany, Dr. Valerio presented a lecture, "Listen to the Children: They are Making Music" and a one-day workshop for the children, parents, and teachers at the Gordon Institute for Early Childhood Music Learning at the University of Freiburg. In summer 2005 Dr. Valerio hosted the Gordon Institute for Music Learning Mastership Certification-Elementary Level I for 17 participants. She also published "A Music Acquisition Research Agenda for Music Learning Theory," a chapter in The Development and Practical Application of Music Learning Theory, Eds. Maria Runfola and Cynthia Taggart, GIA: Chicago. Dr. Valerio collaborated with colleagues from Offr Schulwerk, Dalcroze, and Kodaly in a series of conference presentations promoting active music making. Valerio conducts the St. Peter's Catholic Elementary Children's Choir and coordinates music education at St. Peter's Catholic School, the Center for Inquiry in Richland 2, and USC/Gateway Child Development and Research Center.

Larry Wyatt, director of choral activities, conducted the Tennessee Collegiate All State, Eastern Connecticut High School Honor Chorus, the Georgia All State Chorus, and the Mississippi High School Summer Music Camp. In fall 2005 he conducted at Hardin Simmons College in Nashville and at Colorado State University in Pueblo. In June 2006 singers from the USC Concert Choir, University Chorus, and the community will travel to Austria to perform Mozart's Requiem under Dr. Wyatt as part of the Mozart anniversary year.

School of Music Alumni We’re Looking for You

The University of South Carolina School of Music has a very proud legacy. We have matured from our humble beginnings of a handful of students and faculty, to our current level of 500 undergraduate and graduate students and more than 50 faculty members. The School of Music has been housed in many different colleges over the last 75 years and has been in our present location adjacent to the Koger Center for the Arts for the past 10 years.

The mailing of this issue of Da Capo will reach more than 3,000 School of Music alumni, but we may have missed someone. You can help by sending us your current information or information about someone you know who attended USC’s School of Music. Please use the envelope included in this magazine to share names of fellow alumni and addresses.
