National Fellowships website link  Heidi Bretz

- Located in Honors college but work with all students.
- Fellowships nationally competitive, merit based, can do many different things
- Funding from outside the university
- Jen Bess (director), Heidi Bretz (international awards), Matt Klopfenstein (graduate school focus)
- Identify and apply for external funding to pursue incredible opportunities like research, study abroad, and public service
- Do several types of outreach with the students
- Students and recent alumni need to have: solid academics particularly in their area of focus, leadership experience, resilience and follow-through in the face of obstacles, unique perspectives on the worlds’ biggest problems, and intellectual curiosity and drive to make an impact
- Applying for fellowships helps students: clarify their goals, articulate their academic, personal, and professional identity, develop materials that can be adapted for graduate school and job applications, build campus and community networks, individual guidance from faculty, and possibility to get funding to do cool things
- How can we help – tell students, 3rd floor in DeSausure room 328; direct advisees to our website. Refer students to our team (only on their website), sign up for the candidate newsletter, and share events and promotions
- Referral form is under the Faculty and Staff Toolbox on the website
- Students direct them to the Getting Started page to explore the list of available awards
- Make an appointment is on EAB under Involvement and Engagement 0000000

Hardship Withdrawal website link

Kelsey McGarrigan
Josh Weakland

- Kelsey is the coordinator and located in Patterson Hall
- It is not guaranteed to be approved. Committee makes the decision and look at many factors. Criteria is on the website for the hardship withdrawal process.
- Hardship occurs during the WF period of a semester or a previous period. During the WF period can apply for a hardship withdrawal, will have a decision before the end of the semester. The student will have to go through the process rather quickly. Previous semester, they have up to 2 years to withdraw from a semester.
- Outside of the 2years, do have the ability to review but it is highly unlikely to move forward.
- Up to 2 years to apply for a hardship withdrawal
- Takes 45-60 days for the student to go through the process. Students have to complete application and then to provide the documentation
- Committee meets once a month
- Tuition refund – if hardship withdrawal is approved, tuition refund is a separate process.
- Tuition refund is full withdrawal. Not connected to Hardship Withdrawal
- No special notation on the transcript. It will reflect a W.
- Have option for applying for partial due to very exceptional circumstances and cannot be academic rigor and difficulty.
- Columbia undergrad students only can apply
- Committee does have medical and mental professionals
- Students must meet with Josh to discuss the hardship process and prevent the snowball effect for the next semester. Create a plan for the student and connect with folks on campus to help the student
- If a student mentions they plan to withdraw from the university, please have the m complete withdrawal inquiry form.
