

Planning Your Portfolio in

Portfolio Planning Checklist

One of the best ways to start creating your portfolio is to Plan Ahead! The following pages have suggestions for each page of the basic portfolio.

Welcome Page

The Welcome Page is a good place to greet the visitor to your page. Some things to include are:

- A brief message welcoming the visitor.
- Information about what is in the portfolio.
- How to navigate your portfolio.
- A picture of yourself.

Standards Page

The NAEYC Standards template allows you to insert information as you progress through your academic career. This page allows your instructors and prospective employers to see your best work on the Internet.

A good idea is to select a few items from your physical portfolio that are the BEST representations of your work. There are a number of things you can use to demonstrate your mastery of a particular standard:

- A research paper on a subject related to the standard.
- A class project that concerns or includes the standard.
- Pictures from a project or classroom experience.
- A lesson plan and responses from your students (a release form will be necessary to use work from your students and post it on the Internet).
- Video or audio clips that show you involved in activities that meet the standard (a release form will be necessary for videos that include other people, such as your students in class, other University students, or instructors).

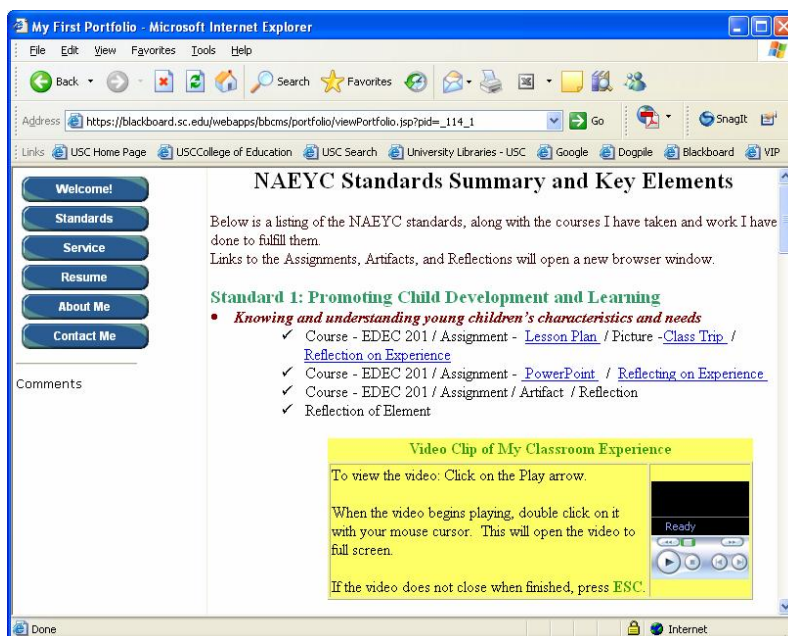

You may also include a reflective essay on each particular element of the standards. The essay may be a short introduction to the materials you are presenting, a description of how they relate to the standard, and some personal observations on the experience.

Video and audio clips should demonstrate your ability, and suggest how they are related to the standard. The clips should be short – just a representation of your work. If a professor or prospective employer wishes to see more of your work, you can provide them with a longer version for observation.

You can insert links to your documents, pictures, and videos on the NAEYC standards template.

Remember:

- When adding documents or pictures, you can tell Blackboard to either open them in a new browser, or simply on the current web page.
- If the item is something you would like viewers to print, set it to open in a new browser. This will give them the option to print a copy.
- When adding video clips, include instructions on how to play the video, and how to exit when finished.

Listed below are the NAEYC standards, and space to write in materials and file names you can use in it.

Service Page

The Service Page is a place for you to highlight your community activities.

Generally, it is easier to use the Service Page template to enter and display information. All you have to do is erase the generic information in the template and replace it with your own.

However, feel free to add pictures of you involved in these activities.
