Student Health Services
An accredited Patient-Centered Medical Home
Supporting the vision of a Healthy Carolina community
The demand for mental health services on college and university campuses is higher than ever, and it’s no wonder. As college students, you face changes and challenges that can cause or exacerbate a variety of mental health concerns including stress, anxiety, grief, depression and addiction.

That’s why the University of South Carolina offers an array of mental health resources among our high quality, nationally accredited health care services. Our staff members provide individual and group counseling, prescribe and manage medications and teach techniques for prevention and self-care. Our online programs help you identify concerns and connect you to resources. And our holistic health care model ensures that you are cared for in a collaborative, coordinated setting.

Your well-being is a top priority for the university, but it requires your participation. Become familiar with the resources available to you. Seek help and accept it when it’s offered. Look out for your friends and fellow students, and help them find support when they need it.

Together, we can maintain a healthy, vibrant Carolina community.
With our Patient-Centered Medical Home approach to health care that promotes integration of medical services with behavioral health services, students have access to a mental health specialist who assists patients with urgent mental health care needs.

The model also creates a collaborative environment for our medical providers, so they can provide the most comprehensive care possible for each student. Students are encouraged to build relationships with each of their providers to ensure their health concerns are addressed in a timely and holistic manner.

Students who visited the counseling center reported in recent satisfaction surveys that their care contributed to their academic success. Students who improve their mental health are more likely to graduate, according to the Healthy Minds Network.

“\[I’ve had to learn - through some very tough and trying lessons - that being open and willing to talk about my feelings is strength beyond strength. Bottling up my feelings never amounted to anything good, and talking to someone who’s willing to listen has been a saving grace - literally.\]

-Brooks Herring, Exercise Science major.
For preventive care, Student Health Services has a mental health initiatives team that focuses on suicide prevention training, stress management consultations and programs such as meditation, pet a pup and events to promote mental health well-being.

Programs Include:
- Suicide prevention training
- Stress management consultations
- Resilience workshops
- C.A.L.M. Oasis meditation space
- Daily guided meditation
- Meditation courses
- Programming to promote mental health resources and stress management skills

Therapist Assisted Online (TAO)

Students can participate in online therapy. They can meet with a counselor via private, secure video-conferencing or participate in completely self-directed educational modules designed to help manage mild, minor and/or periodic symptoms.

Online mental health screening

Students fill out a simple, 10-minute Stress & Depression Questionnaire, identifying themselves with only a User ID that they select. A campus counselor will personally respond to them over this website with options for follow-up, if recommended.

“I used to hide my negative emotions from everyone, including myself. Then I learned that I wasn’t alone. With that, I finally gave myself permission to feel however I was feeling.”

Kognito

Kognito is an evidence-based online program that teaches participants how to recognize signs of psychological distress in a fellow student and allows them to practice, through role-play conversations, how to approach at-risk students, discuss their concerns and connect them with resources on- and off-campus.

Awards & accreditations

In 2014, USC was awarded the national Jed Campus seal, which was based on an extensive external review of our mental health programs and services. The Jed Campus Program currently works with USC to enhance mental health, substance abuse and suicide prevention programming. For more information, please visit sc.edu/healthservices.

USC’s Doctoral Internship Program is accredited through the American Psychological Association. Counseling & Psychiatry was recently reaffirmed in its accreditation through the Association of Accreditation of Ambulatory Healthcare (AAAHC). Student Health Services also reaffirmed their status as an accredited Patient-Centered Medical Home.
