ENGL 429, Studies in American Literature:
Native American Myth, Legend, and Oral Tradition
Dr. Stephen Criswell

Overview: This section of ENGL 429 is a travel course that will include eight days of travel to Native American–related sites across the Southeast. This course will introduce students to the varieties of oral and, to a lesser extent, written narrative traditions of selected American Indian communities. While the course will offer a survey of Native North American myths, legends, and folktales, including those from the Plains, Pacific Northwest, Southwest, and other regions of the present-day United States; readings will focus largely on Southeastern Indian oral traditions, particularly those of the Catawbas, Cherokees, and Creeks. In addition to traditional narrative, other traditional verbal art forms—including songs, proverbs, and prayers—will be discussed. We will closely analyze the relationship of these oral traditions to the cultures from which they emerged and examine more recent forms of these verbal art forms, including contemporary American Indian literature.
