

Professor James Kirylo

The Catholic Teacher: Teaching with Faith, Hope, and Love

James Kirylo is a Professor of Education at the University of South Carolina. He has published numerous works in various journals and written several books, including The Catholic Teacher: Teaching for Social Justice with Faith, Hope, and Love. In this book, he shares about his personal experiences and reflections on what it means to be a Catholic teacher. He draws on the inclusive nature of the Church through ecumenical, interfaith, and interreligious dialogue, as well as the Church's social teachings and its connection to liberation theology and a critical pedagogy in the context of faith.
