

Rose Buyck Newton Biography

A native of South Carolina, Rose is a third-generation banker who has dedicated the past 25 years of her professional career in banking, with the majority of that time in executive management and marketing at the Bank of Clarendon in Manning, South Carolina. In 2017, she was named chairman of the Board of Directors of the Bank of Clarendon.

She is passionate about all things South Carolina, with a specific passion for the health and well-being of rural South Carolina and those individuals living and working in our rural communities. She believes that "the soul of South Carolina lives in the rural areas of our great state and it is our responsibility to insure the viability of these communities for years to come." She holds a specific interest in improving financial literacy through education and training for both students and adults.

She holds a degree in finance and economics from Converse College and a master's in business administration from the University of South Carolina. She is a certified financial marketing professional and has completed the American Bankers Association School of Bank Marketing. She is a 2001 graduate of Leadership South Carolina and is a member of the 2017 Liberty Fellowship Class.

She serves as director for the South Carolina Bankers Association, serves on the Board of Trustees of the University of South Carolina and is the chair of its Audit and Compliance Committee; she also serves as a member of the Board of Governors for Coastal Carolina Hospital.

When she's not burning up the highway between her home in Bluffton and her work in Manning, you might find her in the stands with Weston, her husband of 22 years, cheering on her three children in football, basketball and soccer, discussing the latest novel at book club, serving on multiple civic organizations and boards or swinging a Cocky cloth at a South Carolina sporting event.
