Call for Abstracts
University of South Carolina Nutrition Consortium
2024 Nutrition Symposium
When: Thursday, March 28th, 2024
Where: Koger Center Gallery Room

Call for Abstracts: University students (undergraduate and graduate), postdocs, and trainees are invited to submit an abstract of 250 words maximum to present at the symposium. Abstracts are due by 5:00 p.m. on January 26th. We are looking to represent the latest nutrition research and practice at the University of South Carolina in poster and rapid oral presentation sessions. This includes, but is not limited to, the following topics:

- Ensuring food security
- Understanding and influencing food choice for health promotion
- Assessing dietary patterns in development, health, and disease
- Promoting maternal, infant, and child nutrition
- Preventing childhood obesity
- Developing and using technology to measure and promote healthy diets
- Optimal nutrition for healthy aging and chronic disease prevention
- Global nutrition
- Performance nutrition
- Dietary recommendations for special populations

Format: Each 250 words maximum abstract should be formatted using the following headings:
- Objectives: State the objective the study was intended to address.
- Methods: Provide a clear, concise description of specific methods, including research design. Describe interventions, if used.
- Results: Report the most important findings, including results of analyses. Unless an abstract is focused on methods or protocols, all abstracts must include at least preliminary results.
- Conclusions: Summarize in 1 or 2 sentences the primary outcomes of the study, including their potential importance (avoid generalizations).

Process: Abstracts will be peer reviewed and selected abstracts will be programmed as poster presentations and/or our new rapid-fire oral presentation session. All presentations will be eligible for awards. Abstracts presented within the last year from national and international meetings are welcome. As a submitting author, please certify that all co-authors agree to the submission of the abstract. You will be notified the week of February 12th if your submission has been accepted.
