Lander University invites applicants for a Lecturer of Sociology or Human Services (title depends on credentials) to begin in August 2020. A Master of Social Work degree is required, although candidates with a doctorate in Human Services, Social Work, or Sociology (focus area in Social Work, Social Welfare Policy, Medical Sociology, or Mental Health) are welcomed. Applicants should be able to teach courses such as case management, non-profit organizations, social welfare policies, medical sociology, aging, or sociology of mental health as well as some human services courses, such as drug and alcohol counseling or crisis intervention and prevention. Preference is given to candidates with licensure as a clinical social worker.

The Department of Government, Criminology, and Sociology is a part of the College of Behavioral and Social Sciences along with the departments of Psychological Science; History and Philosophy; and Military Science. The Department offers majors in sociology and other disciplines and minors in such areas as non-profit management and human services. The B.S. in Human Services was recently approved by the S.C. Commission on Higher Education.

The normal teaching load is 27 hours per year and the successful candidate will be expected to advise students and participate in departmental and university service. This position would involve teaching at the main campus and at the University Center of Greenville. Summer teaching assignments are available.

Located in the upstate region of South Carolina, Lander is a public comprehensive university committed to teaching in a liberal arts environment. Learn more at www.lander.edu. Review of applications begins immediately, and will continue until the position is filled. Preference will be given to completed applications received by February 1, 2020.
